- 4. a. In mid-1956 construction was halted on the building of a large leather production combine (kombinat skorzany) in Nowy Targ. It was to have been an installation of about 12 large buildings capable of producing 15 million pairs of shoes annually and was to have included a tannery, leather and rubber production departments, a shoe production department and a large machine repair shop. After preparing a large area of land for the installation, only two of the large buildings were completed up to the middle of 1956.
  - b. In late 1955, construction was held up on the building of a large tannery at Nowe Dwory near Warsaw. As planned and approved, the tannery was to have been capable of "wet" (moczyc) processing 4,000 skins daily.
- * c. Generally speaking, investment plans and actual construction projects were being seriously changed and curtailed. This was especially true in the machine industries. In some instances, even though the machines were on hand, there were no buildings to house them. At the Ministry50X1-HUM of Light Industry, the first version of the 1957 portion of the

The Field Air Raid Defense organization (Terenowa Ochrona Przeciw Lotnicza-TOPL) was the organization that checked on the building of shelters, etc. TOPL also planned and conducted courses and organized teams for air raid defense. In the 50X1-HUM Ministry of Light Industry in Warsaw, there was a four or fiveman office which occupied itself exclusively with TOPL matters. this offic50X1-HUM had several sealed boxes of instructions which were kept locked

* a. The regime recognized the sad state of economic affairs in Poland even before the Poznan demonstrations and was discussing and contemplating many changes in the economic structure of the country. A great reduction in bureaucratic personnel was to take place, from the highest to the lowest level. A glaring example of the extent to Thich bureaucracy had grown in Poland and one which which will be first on the agenda of correction was the industrial planning and controlling function which was being repeated on practically every level of the Party and the government from the Council of State and Central Committee of the FZPR through county administrative and Party organs down to the factory level. The PZPR Central Committee was and is to combine all of its

- * b. A conversion of certain factories to producing better and/or more saleable products was also being contemplated.
- * c. The need for a wiser use of foreign currencies and a better balance of trade was being impressed on all enterprises and ministries by the Party.
  - d. Important changes were to be made in all ministries in order to attempt an alleviation of the economic ills which beset them all.
- * e. The Poznan demonstrations stopped much of the effort being expended on realizing the above plans. After the riots, most assets and efforts were being used to pacify a demoralized population and alleviate their immediate needs.

* f.	An already "large" number of unemployed prevented or curtailed the above-mentioned reductions in bureaucratic personnel. 50X1-HUM finding the proper employment for the increasing number of graduates from higher schools, technical schools, and universities had become a serious problem. The amnesty law had liberated large numbers of prisoners; it added to the unemployment problem and took away the much needed workers from the mines, stone-quarries, etc., for which enterprises the regime finds it difficult to recruit workers. (Coal production was currently running about 85% of plans and the lack of building materials like crushed stone was seriously affecting construction plans.) reductions 50X1-HUN the armed forces were being held up for fear of increasing the number of unemployed. the 50X1-HUN Ministry of Light Industry, where five departments were being liquidated or reduced in staff, release notices were being recalled. Many employees were being paid who had no real function to perform. A similar situation existed in the State Economic Planning Commission (PKPG).  50X1-HUM
* g.	great efforts were being made to promote two possible economic expedients: 1) foreign loans, and 2) selling more coal to the West (if the USSR could be made to take less 50X1-HUM Polish coal).
